Let the Redeemed of the Lord Say So! By H. Eddie Fox, George E. Morris

A new millennium is dawning and this pivotal time in history provides the perfect setting for Christian witness, according to this newly released edition of a classic on how to share one's faith. The book explores the fact that many churches do not believe that witnessing is their calling. Fox and Morris say that churches are shy about their lack of knowledge and ability to effectively communicate the message of the Gospel. Let the Redeemed of the Lord Say So! attempts to erase the fears of inadequate witnessing and give confidence to Christians to spread the Word. It is a book for individuals who long to be effective witnesses, for congregations who have a desire to reach people and grow, and for college and seminary classes that are designed to motivate and inspire witnessing, according to Maxie D. Dunman of Asbury Theological Seminary and the World Methodist Council, who wrote the Foreword.

Editorial Review

Review

"A valuable book that clearly and biblically challenges the whole church--pastor and people--to the unfinished task of sharing the gospel. . .with the unreached world.." -- Dr. Sterling W. Huston, Director, North American Ministries of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association

"Everyone should put this book at the top of their reading list. . .The authors have dedicated their lives to research in evangelism and mission. This book makes their findings accessible to all." -- Dr. Howard Mellor, Principal, Cliff College, England

"To my knowledge, Let the Redeemed of the Lord Say So! is the most useful text on the ministry of testimony published in this generation." -- Dr. George G. Hunter, Dean of E. Stanley Jones School of World Mission and Evangelism, Asbury Theological Seminary

"Two thousand years ago Jesus called lay persons to become the first apostles. The clarion call still resounds for lay persons to proclaim the Word and to share the message 'Jesus is Lord.'" -- Dr. Francis M. Alquire, chairperson of the Executive Committee, World Methodist Council.
